MEMORANDUM

SUBJECT: Clark Committee Briefings; 9:30 - 12:30
G.A.O. Building, 23 March 1955

1. The Clark Task Force has requested a briefing for 23 March 1955. They have indicated the following specific questions which they want answered and have indicated there will be questions on other matters. The Director has indicated that he will answer most of the questions, but in certain instances will call on specific individuals to fill in details. Consequently, it is requested that briefing notes be prepared for each question, and that a copy of the notes be handed to the official indicated who may be called on to supplement the Director.

2. It is requested that the Action Officer designated to prepare the briefing notes on the questions pertaining to the Clandestine Services start each answer on a separate page. Each answer to be triple-spaced and not to exceed three pages. After approval by DD/P, the item will be condensed to one page or less. Short, tersely written paragraphs are desired.

3. Answers should be delivered [REDACTED] by close of business, 15 March 1955, and in any event, not later than noon, 16 March 1955.

4. The schedule for the use of these notes: DD/P - 16 March;
IG - 17 March; DCI - 18 March.

FOR THE DEPUTY DIRECTOR (PLANS): [REDACTED]

8. The Task Force has heard of CIA as the "Fourth Force;" an elaboration of the philosophy behind this is desired.

1. The term "Fourth Force" results from an agreement between the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the DCI which details the wartime command relationships between CIA and the Armed Forces in the field of Unconventional Warfare. This agreement, titled "Command Relationships Between CIA and the Armed Forces in Active Theaters of War Where American Forces Are Engaged," provides that: (a) CIA will retain its organizational integrity insofar as is practicable, including control of technical and special administrative matters; (b) The CIA Force assigned to a Commander of a Command established by the JCS will be under the immediate command of a member of CIA designated by the DCI and acceptable to the military commander; (c) The Commander of a unified or specified command will exercise authority over CIA Unconventional Warfare forces assigned to his area corresponding to that exercised over the Army, Naval, and Air Force component forces similarly assigned. In other words, CIA will become in wartime the fourth component force of the theater commander.

2. The lack of a clear understanding of the command relationship between the Office of Strategic Services and the Armed Forces during World War II and the misunderstandings resulting therefrom were factors which contributed to the development of the agreed command relationship in wartime.

3. A major factor which necessitates CIA's retention of its organizational integrity is the need for the U.S. to maintain an effective national clandestine intelligence service both in periods of peace and war. To meet this requirement the United States must develop and maintain a national clandestine intelligence service which in time of war is geared to meet the needs of the military and still be in a position to perform its clandestine intelligence functions in the post war years in support of national policies.

14. A comment on the interchange of information at theater command level with reference to assets and capabilities, as distinct from sources, is desired?

1. In order to provide for the interchange of information at theater command level, CIA maintains officers on the staffs

25X1A

25X1A

25X1A

These officers are integrated into the theater planning structure and are responsible for assisting in war planning and for advising the CDMCs with respect to CIA assets and capabilities in planning and preparation for wartime operations. Officers, so assigned, receive guidance from the War Plans Group of the CIA Senior War Planner whose area of responsibility is coterminous with that of the CDMC concerned. These Senior War Planners and the War Plans Groups prepare the CIA theater war plans which are in consonance with and complementary to the military commander's plans. For example, the CIA planners, in many cases, collaborate with the military planners to the extent of recommending geographic areas in which clandestine action is potentially most favorable. This information in turn is used, where feasible, as the basis for the military requirement for CIA wartime operations.

2. Information concerning assets and capabilities for "Cold War" operations is not released to the military at theater level except on a "need-to-know" basis as provided for in NSC 5412.
